Importance of English Language Lab

Language learning involves essentially the ability to communicate in various contexts. Communicating effectively means clarity in speech, the choice of appropriate expressions and tone befitting formal and informal situations. As students of English, they must learn not only the pronunciation, vocabulary and grammar but also to construct meaningful sentences that convey a complete thought and express emotions. They also need to use the language for several communicative functions, such as asking for directions, making requests, making statements, asking questions and apologizing or congratulating. Interacting in different social and work situations is a very important part of learning to speak the language.

Communication in any language largely depends on clarity of speech. This is true of English too. Articulation of the sounds and pronunciation of words form the basis for intelligibility. During the course of the English Language Lab, the learners learn to communicate in academic and professional contexts, essentially in the context of debating, interviews, presentations and group discussions. The exercises and activities aim at giving hands-on experience to the learners in acquiring these skills. It also pays attention to natural conversational skills in different contexts with focus on various functions of the language. The IPA (The Indian Phonetic Alphabetic) symbols, representing the sound system in English are used at the recognition level to facilitate the learner's use of dictionary for pronunciation. Problem areas are pointed out and, wherever necessary, deviations in the pronunciation of Indian speakers of English are brought to the notice of the learners.
